Initial Directions

Any reading is a Conversation between the Reader and the Subject. It is very important that both participate.

- The cards are shuffled such that some are upside down in the deck.
- The Reader deals ten cards, face down, in a fan in front of the Subject.
- The Subject asks an open question, and chooses a card from the fan, flipping it along the longer side to reveal it.
- The Reader interprets the card and invites the Subject to join in the Conversation.
- The process is repeated three times per question. The cards interact according to their value and suit: a higher value one influences a lower card, and each suit represents a different aspect of the Subject.
- Upon finishing reading the cards for one question, they are discarded and the Reader invites the Subject to ask another question. Up to three questions can be answered per reading.
- When the reading is concluded, the Reader asks if the Subject would like to know the identity of the last card in the fan. This card may then be revealed, and its absence in the reading interpreted as well.

The directions and interpretations for the cards provided here are only initial suggestions. Interpretations will evolve as the Reader performs new readings, finding new meanings, new rules.
